It is especially important that these sketches shall contain all necessary views and dimensions, as the object in question may be miles away from the drafting room, and the sketches are the draftsmans sole guide when making the final drawings. For making these sketches, the draftsman should have a pad or notebook of cross-section paper, one or two triangles, a compass, a twofoot rule, and a pair of calipers. When an object is to be made for the first time, the design is first prepared by the engineer or designer from a consideration of the necessary relations between the different parts and the requisite properties of the same. The head draftsman may then take the design, and work up the necessary details to a point where the drawings can be finished by the other draftsmen. 136. An important requirement which should be kept in view in making working drawings is clearness. The drawing should have but one meaning. To this end, enough views must be given, so that for the object represented no uncertainty shall exist as to its shape and proportions. These different views should be placed near enough together, so that they may be readily compared, but not so close that there will be any tendency to confusion. When certain necessary information cannot be conveyed by the drawing alone, explanatory notes must be given on the same or another sheet. 137. Kinds of Lines. Drawings are easier to read, and...
