Excerpt: .as great as that of the actual residents. The bazaar is a long, dark, dirty street, crowded with shops and stores and manifests on the part of the people a good degree of industry and attention to business. The houses upon the Campus were almost universally built upon a grand and noble scale, three or four stories high, of hewn stone--with many marble columns in various parts of them. Each one has an orange grove, of an ao.ro or two in extent, surrounding it, and the whole is enclosed in a stone wall, in gome instances, at least, thirty feet high. I think I may be very safe in saying that the building of such houses as these once were, with their appurtenances, would have cost at least an hundred thousand dollars in any part of the United States. There certainly was, previous to...
